

Per our presentation to the client on March 6th, we came up with a group of things we liked, things we longed for, and things we learned(lacked). Below is a summary.

Liked

- Android Studio
- Trello
- DB setup on draw.io
- Our group (x2)

It seems we all enjoy the software we're working on, and our group dynamic.

Longed For

- Consistent Meeting Times (x2)
- Better Communication (x3)

We're all on the same page, that we need to have more group time, and a better idea where everyone is on their respective piece of the project.

Learned(Lacked)

- Time Management
- Git Sharing (VCS)
- Learning Android Studio (x3)

We're all learning the software, and how to efficiently accomplish our tasks.

GUIDELINES

Going forward, we have agreed to consistently meet on Saturday evenings, after 4pm. We will have this set time that except for extenuating circumstances we can plan to work as a group and advance towards our goals.

We have agreed that those who are behind on Android Studio will try to work to familiarize themselves with its workings, to better add to the development side of the product.

We've also decided that e-mails will no longer be our day to day way of communicating, since in a few weeks we have sent literally hundreds of emails, which are hard to keep up with and organize. So we will look to better facilitate IM services such as Google Hangouts when we are not all face to face.
